Orlando, 03.07.2013, 21:00 Time

Business Nature Inc - The reasons for the sweeping success of online marketing are obvious. The technical aspects of the Internet and the creative opportunities provided are strong prerequisites which underlie its success.

The area of design and development, as well as advertising and sales, can reach truly high levels, so as to attract prospects and boost company brand awareness among the online community which abounds in shoppers. Furthermore, online marketing provides comprehensive customer engagement by means of search engine optimization which facilitates the online prominence of businesses, search engine marketing, banner ads placed on websites, mobile advertising, etc.

Reputable online media such as the New York Times dedicate special prominence to online marketing. In 2008, the New York Times published an estimate of the total amount of user data collected by large companies with Internet based business. The figure published of the potential for collecting customer data was said to be up to 2,500 times per month for each user. Strong evidence of the significance of Internet marketing for successful and prosperous business. The estimate was based on several types of customer interactions with companies' websites, and hits obtained from adverts by advertising networks. The indubitable advantage of low costs of Internet marketing is yet another prime advantage: costs incurred to reach a wide audience.
